2. Citations and explanations:

The present patent application discloses a biliary catheter with needle-puncture device for use in diagnostic and therapeutic procedures.

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: WO1996/013296 A1

D2: US5176647 A

D1 shows method and apparatus for electrosurgically obtaining access to the biliary tree. The catheter has two lumens, the first having a needle knife therein and the second being used to infuse a contrast medium to visualise the common bile duct.

D2 shows an instrument for performing a radiographic cholangiogram. It is housing a hollow catheter comprising a cannula with sharpened edge to cut the cystic duct. Also mounted within the instrument are an advancing and a locking mechanism for the catheter as well as an injection system for delivering the contrast media.

Both documents do not show

- radiopaque marks to view the far end of the catheter in x-ray
- a retraction blockage component for restricting movement of concentric perforation tube.

Therefore none of the documents is considered of particular relevance to claims 1-8.

WRITTEN OPINION OF THE INTERNATIONAL SEARCHING AUTHORITY

International application No.
PCT/BR 2005/000190

Consequently, criteria of novelty and inventive step are met by claims 1-8.

Industrial applicability is given for all claims.
